

Building Resilience: Lessons from Japan's Human Security Policy for Southeast Asia

Speaker:

Maria Thaemar Camanag Tana

(Associate Professor, Japanese Studies Program, School of Social Sciences, Ateneo de Manila University / Research Fellow, 2024-2025 Japan Foundation-Global Japan Studies Fellowship)

Moderator:

Ryoko Nakano (Professor, School of International Studies / Center for the Study of Global Cultures and Societies)

This seminar analyzes Japan's evolving approach to human security in the context of contemporary regional challenges. It highlights the initiatives of the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) in peacebuilding, disaster risk reduction, and humanitarian assistance, focusing on the Philippines as a case study. The analysis examines how these initiatives align with the country's human security priorities and contribute to enhancing resilience. Key questions explored include the benefits Southeast Asia may derive from Japan's human security initiatives and the implications of Japan's evolving defense posture on its role in Southeast Asia, particularly concerning the balance between human security and military capabilities. Ultimately, the goal is to provide actionable insights for Southeast Asia to strengthen its human security frameworks and effectively address emerging security challenges.

Venue (On-site & Online):

[On-site] Room 209, Humanities and Social Sciences Lecture Hall 2, Kanazawa University (金沢大学 人社第2講義棟209講義室)

Time: 2024

Nov 25

13:00-14:30

(3rd period)

Online participants please register from

<https://forms.office.com/r/firgSTyA4X>

Organizer: Center for the Study of Global Cultures and Societies (人間社会研究域附属 グローバル文化・社会研究センター グローバル・レジリエンス研究部門)

Inquiry: s-maeno@staff.kanazawa-u.ac.jp